Jackgreen Management Changes

Jackgreen Limited (ASX:JGL) announced today a change in management as the company embarks on its Mark II strategy to drive profitable growth.

Jackgreen Chairman (and former AGL CEO) Greg Martin will, in the short term, assume the position of Executive Chairman to guide the Mark II strategy and will recruit a new CEO to lead the business through its next phase of growth and development.

Andrew Randall will step down from the role of Managing Director and assume an advisory position within Jackgreen to help assist the company through its change in leadership and to further develop the solid relationships that the company has established with similarly focussed environmental organizations and groups.

“Since founding the Jackgreen business in 2004, Andrew has grown the company to become a leader in Australia’s renewable energy industry,” said Mr Martin.

“Under Andrew’s leadership, Jackgreen grew from a start-up to a dynamic growth business as Australia’s only dedicated renewable energy retailer.

“Andrew committed Jackgreen to help Australians make a positive difference, with now more than 75,000 households choosing Jackgreen to reduce their impact on the environment.

“In 2008, Andrew was instrumental in the company’s diversification through the acquisition of energy efficiency business Easy Being Green and now, the company has grown to employ more than 250 staff and contractors.

“Jackgreen is greatly indebted to Andrew’s vision, hard work and the significant achievements the company has made under his leadership as business founder and inaugural Managing Director.

Mr Randall said “The time is right to step aside for new leadership. The company is crossing the threshold this year into a profitable and growing business and I believe fresh leadership with significant industry experience will put Jackgreen in an excellent position to achieve its forecast targets.

The company further announced it had employed Mr Don Tribe to the role of General Manager Customer Services. Don has previous relevant energy sector experience at AGL with further roles in project management, billing and collections in other enterprises and industries.

Mr Andrew Woodward, CFO and Company Secretary will step down as a Director of the company by the time of the Annual General Meeting in November 2009. In coming months the Board intends to appoint an additional independent director with skills and experience that will complement the capabilities of the existing Board.
